He appears to have entered into a league with some of the mandarins at Canton and Swatow to squeeze certain wealthy natives in Hongkong. With this object, in August, 1874, he concected a most referious scheme for intimidating a man named Yeung Amow, and wringing from Her engines have been converted from common him some of his hard-carned money. Amow possessed property both in Hongkong and Swatow, as well as family houses at Macao and Choy Hung. His brothers, Apo, living at Swatow, and Arat, living at Macao, were also-marked-out-for extortion, and the former was cast into prison by the mandarins at Swatow on the frivolous pretext that he had built his houses too high. In order to get a hold over Amow, the prisoner Lee Lun Kwai sought to trump up a charge of murder against the brothers, and he took-steps to so intimidate Away that he would consent to pay a heavy black mail to be relieved of the charge, for which there was not the smallest foundation. The three brothers were well known as men of character and standing, their only crims being that they were rich and could not be squeezed. In pursuance of his equally daring and dasterdly design, LEE Lum Kwai, who had received the button of a small mandarin from the Chinese Authorities and gathered audacity from the fact probably (deeming himself safe from British law as a

Its allusions to honest patriots, foreign bales Raw Silk. adventurers, and the like, and the highly moral, semi-pathetic tone in which it is written, are calculated to excite suspicion rather than confidence and when we examine it closely we find the suspicions confirmed. When the writer speaks, for instance, of the company rendering great service to Russian finances by bringing gold from St. Petersburg and Berlin, be trusts a of his readers. The real explanation of the incident is this .- According to the contract the ON CALCUTTA.-Bank, sight 223 company buys gold and accepts from the Government paper money at the rate current in the nearest commordial town. As the Russian paper is always much lower in Roumania than in Russia, they buy gold not in Bucharest, but in St supposed patriotism. The thing is simply a apologist, with all his sharpness, has made mistake. He has endeavoured to prove too much. The company had unquestionably, as I learn from independent sources, enermous difficulties to encounter. In the course of a few days it had to organize a great administration at many points far distant from each other. The only agents it ordinary peaceful times, when there are no special temptations to dishonesty. Suchmen could not fai to come at once into contact with the Ronmanian anthorities. Accustomed to derive a considerable part of their revenues from smuggling and other methods of defrauding the Government, they no doubt used their position as agents of the company to do a little business on their own account.

Then there were the difficulties of transport. The Roumanian railways were insufficient to transport even the troops, and the provisions had to be transported in peasants' carts. For some time after the Army crossed the frontier unusually heavy rains made the soft roads quite impracticable; and when the fine weather came the majority of the peasants went home for the harvest, taking their carts and horses with them. In Bulgaria the difficulties increased. The strategists often changed their plans at very short notice, and the company sometimes received orders which it was physically impossible to execute. As the sphere of Hing-tai to travelling trader. operations extended, the delays in receiving payment from the Government increased. During the first five months the firm expended 25 millions of roubles and received only 16 millions in payment, because no money was paid till the receipts and other documents were verified by the central Commissariat Bureau. This delay naturally produced financial distress, and the to travelling trader. company was compelled to employ a large number of smaller companies, composed of not very respectable Jewish traders. These little companies unquestionably swindled to a considerable extent, but whether they did so for their own benefit, or for the big company, or for both, I know not. At the same time the company met with a formidable obstacle in another. quarter. Many of the Commissariat officers systematically refused to accept the provisions offered until a certain percentage had been paid to them for their own private use. So, at least, I have heard from many independent sources. and I have little difficulty in believing it, The Special Correspondent of The Times, writ. because even in time of peace, these gentlemen do not enjoy a good reputation. Unless they are very grossly maligned, they have a regular tariff which all army furnishers must pay, and which is, of course eventually paid by the Treasury. The 10 per cent commission received by the company was, of course, insufficient to meet this illegal demand, and consequently an extra legal profit had to be obtained. Thus it was almost impossible for the company to be honest, however much it had wished to be. Under the old system, in which there was practically no control, all this would have remained officially unknown; but now the General Control entered upon our long winter of isolation from gratulating each other, "Perhaps now, at last, the Administration examines the accounts of the Commissariat. Very soon the Controllers found that Ho Aling, was charged with gambling.

This house the most insignficant never left with-the picture had its reverse side; and terrible functionary makes no allusion to dissent, and out feeling he had received an individual it was. Little children unable to walk slone he gravely writes of the clergy that they welcome, while the familiar word or jest dis- Georgia were described; aged parents, ill and decrepit, "set a shiping example of all the Christain tinguished the friend or liabitue? She who Golden Spur were left to die; wives were left by their virtues." Nevertheless he lets hip some had for all the kind word, the happy phrase, husbands to starve; and the strong robbed admissions which read oddly. Thus, according to yet whose gentle dignity kept aloof any risk the weak of even their last morsel of bread. ding to the last report published it is in the of the forwardness which might have been Amoy It is a time like this that brings out human—suny that religious duties are most regionsly feared in a society as inixed as that which west stands of the unterests of the Liberal party obliged her very one—striking feature was the fact that of compulsion. Next in order of piety come to receive. She who to her latest day reigned was a far greater inclination amongst the the peasants, then the Civil Servants of the over society by her exquisite tact even more bulk of the people to lie down and die in Crown then the publicaus, and distly polite than by her position; and gained all hearts Adolph lespair, than to turn to violence and law- occiety. The commercial classes are nowhere; by that irresistible charm which sprang from Alfred Hawley lessnes. A grain-dealer's shop was plun, and there are 25 per cent of the supposed the well of kindness in her own. But the Cap Horn dered here and there, but there was nothing Orthodox Russians who do not show up exigencies of the society in which she played Contoluna like grain riote, or grain robbery on any sys- sucharistical certificates at all. How comes so prominent a part had effec I in her the F. Stamee tematic scale. In the relief camps it was there to he such an immense number of traditions of her youthful days. Between George necessary to protect the store houses and to persons who defy the law? The thing would the type she represented and that of the Heumenia put up strong barriers to prevent starving be inexplicable but-for the corruptness of "Grande Dame de l'Ancien Régime" there Hawkesbury newcomers plundering their weaker brothen the priests in making capital ont of dissent, is a great gulf fired by national habits and Henrik Ibsen of their bread; but once settled down to and for a peculiar twist in Russian sharecter, character. Lady Palmerston, underfortering Iris work, and in the receipt of regular food or which will impel a man who has bought a circumstances, might live again; but the M. Selshan
